

Contents/Sommaire

Seeing Is Believing – Or Is It? (Voir c’est croire – vous croyez ?)

Donald BEECHER

“Suspense is Believing: The Reality of Ben Jonson’s The Alchemist” 8

Marie-Hélène BESNAULT

“Belief and Spectacle at Early Performances of Doctor Faustus” 19

Pauline BLANC

“Seeing-is-believing Vision and the Power of Verbal Framing
in the Tudor Theatre” 45

Jean-Paul DÉBAX

“Four Poets as Presenters and Interpreters in Late Tudor Drama” 58

Bob GODFREY

“Limits of Illusion in the Theatres of John Rastell” 70

Michael HATTAWAY

“Over their Heads: Iago, Vices, and ‘Denotement’” 86

Peter HAPPÉ

“Deceptions: ‘The Vice’ of the Interludes and Iago” 100

Richard HILLMAN

“Speaking of Miracles: Seeing, Believing – and Hearing” 118

André LASCOMBES
“Elements of a Persuasion Strategy in the English Cycles and Early Moral Plays”	135
Catherine LISAK
“Dramatic Assumption and the Fracture of Certainty in Shakespeare and Samuel Rowley’s When You See Me You Know Me (1605)”	151
John MCGAVIN
“Medieval theatricality and spectatorship”	172
Roberta MULLINI
“Playing the Monster: Changing Conventions in the Wit Plays”	189
Yvonne PHOENIX
“... and that before mine eyes” (Cambises): The Furious Passion for Images, and Their Reception during the Tudor Period”	205
Armelle SABATIER
“No longer shall you gaze on’t, lest your fancy / May think anon it moves’: Seeing and Believing in the Moving Statue in The Winter’s Tale ”	220
Greg WALKER
“Acting (and Feeling) Responsible: Lindsay’s Pauper and the Problems of Perception”	231
Grant WILLIAMS
“Being Seen is Believing: Spectacle, Ethics, and the Others of Belief in Elizabethan Revenge Tragedy”	237